The Daylight Store

A Barre Party in Boston.

A Barre reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Delmont Locke Ricker of Somerville, Mass., on Wednesday, May 4. Mrs. Ricker will be remembered as Miss Trotter, a former resident in Spaulding high school.

Among those present were Misses Evelyn Phelps, Joyce Buebe, Carlie Linneking, Eva Smith, Esther Mudgett, Bertha Bau, Jeannette Williams, Caroline Trommer, Jessica Trommer, Dagmar Holle, Flora Hugh, Anna Brash, Katherine Cogan, Anna Cogan, Vita Beckley, Mrs. J. D. Roberts and M. B. Ricker.

Mr. and Mrs. Ricker entertained in their usual charming manner. The invitations had read:

"From half past seven till any old time."

May 4, will you be a guest of mine? A box party it is to be.

So bring a box, that all may see. The invitation resulted in a collection of all sorts of boxes. Twelve and several sizes of manila paper were provided, with the request that each guest bundle her own box. The price for the nearest bundle was a hand-carved handkerchief box. A tray held with various articles was then brought in. Several minutes were allowed to examine these. During the interval which elapsed after their removal the contestants tried to make boxes out of paper without aid of scissors, twine, pins or glue. Miss Evelyn Phelps was the lucky winner of a hand-carved glove box. The articles previously mentioned were now passed around, done up in boxes. The recipients tried to tell from memory, plus the aid of the sounds emitted by shaking the boxes, what each contained. Three retained the contents of their boxes.

Pictures, together with titles, were next passed, pasted on slips of paper. The contestants tried to write the suggested jokes. Much merriment was caused when the original jokes were read. Miss Joyce Buebe's joke carried off a B. U. pennant. Miss Esther Mudgett won for herself a hand-carved calendar by planting a flag directly at the north pole, in the next contest.

The climax of the evening was reached when a box hunt was instituted. Each box contained lunch for two. Partners were decided by drawing numbers and hunting in pairs.
